

What Have You Done?

This past week I began doing high-level research on portfolios; what they can look like, how they can be helpful. I completed the GitHub setup as assigned. I researched several inspirational success stories for the previous success story assignment. By completing the success story research, I felt more empowered to keep moving forward despite starting to feel like I was going to fall behind. Lastly, I completed the project management research that was assigned, as well as some additional research into additional methods.

What Are You Doing?

This week I am taking advantage of the burn up list that I created for this week. It has been useful in helping me stay on target. I am doing my best to complete my assignments in a timely manner, though I have been unable to get ahead of them as I had hoped. I have been carving small chunks of time out to complete some GitHub training. I'm not getting it as quickly as I had hoped, but I will with time.

What's Next?

This weekend I hope to get ahead of my work. Specifically I hope to make significant process on the career module, but I would also like to get on top of my research so that I feel more prepared moving forward. I have been feeling as though I'm playing catch up, even though I have complete everything on time so far. In addition to the above, I plan to complete additional research on productivity and home/school/work life balance, for my own sanity.

How to?

I plan to utilize my internet research skills in order to collect data on time management, in addition to the knowledge that is specifically required for this class. I will take advantage of the numerous data collection programs and websites for piecing together my findings in an orderly manner. I will need to practice self-discipline in order to stay focused and keep applying myself without burning out.