Week in Review:

  This week I researched ePortfolios and started to think about what would be included in my own. I completed the Self Evaluation Checklist and the Personal SWOT Analysis Tools. Researching the success stories, gave me some insight into various failure-to-success stories that I did not previously know about. I recreated my mission statement from a previous class and attempted to make it more relevant based on the reading assigned. For my independent research, I chose to look further into SWOT and how it can be used in the workplace and when it should be used. For the development assignment, I completed the optional material and started thinking about my own "why." Throughout the week, I continued to update my Burn-up List and complete all assignments on time.

Reflect and Connect:

  This week's research focus was helpful in learning new information. I knew a little bit about SWOT, portfolios, project management, and personal branding coming into this class, but I have not spent a lot of time learning the details. I felt like this week went a lot better than the first; I felt more as if I understood the purpose of the class and the assignments that were given to us. I really enjoyed some of the branding research. I have watched Simon Sinek's video a few times, and I think it has helped me consider my own path in terms of "why." I cannot say I've improved any skills this week, but as usual my knowledge is expanding from what I previously knew.
