What Have You Done?

This past week I have continued completing my assignments on time. As the weeks progressed, I set aside additional reading material for myself to extend my research. I have learned a lot regarding project management, color psychology, communication techniques, and some other topics I found along the way.

What am I Doing?

This week I am continuing to focus on completing my assignments on time, along with the rest of the career module. I am still struggling to get my work done early, but I am at least managing to complete them on time so far.

What is next?

I desperately want to carve more time out for learning coding before it is mandatory, in an attempt to reduce how overwhelming I expect it to feel. Next month it appears I am in a Fundamental of Physical Science class, which I am hopeful will be manageable and allow me to complete some voluntary lessons in coding before starting Database Structures the following month.

How to?

I'm still working on integrating new time management techniques into my entire life. If I don't get a hold of my time, I know it will become an issue that affects my grades sooner rather than later. I will get a schedule sorted out for myself that forces me to do all of the items I have in queue in a timely manner. This will be my biggest challenge as it is something with which I have always struggled.